Sensing the dead at a seance near Wall Street

Clairvoyant. A Brooklyn psychic medium connects to spirits of the deceased during a Halloween seance.

Therese Relucio, a certified psychic medium with spiky, short black hair, paced in a dim room of a nondescript building just a block from Wall Street.

"It feels like he did die doing some kind of rebellion or some kind of protesting," she said, describing a spirit behind Joe Brahimi, 34, one of nine participants in a Halloween seance Tuesday. "Do you understand who that would be?"

Brahimi replied that the spirit was likely his uncle, Naim Beka, who died in a car bomb while fighting during armed rebellions in Albania. Relucio told Brahimi that his uncle wanted him to stick up for himself at work.

"I can't believe it," Brahimi, who lives in Westchester, said a little later.

At the seance, Brahimi and other attendees sat in a circle while Relucio walked around the room, explaining where she was feeling spirits.

Throughout the night, Relucio said she felt a "judgmental doctor" in scrubs, a flamenco dancer, several relatives and a nun.

Spirits were near the person they were trying to connect with, Relucio said. She tried to help attendees make connections to spirits by describing physical traits and how they died

Teeming with spirits

Most haunted 'hood in NYC

New York City has more than its fair share of death, destruction and misery. But what is the most haunted part of the five boroughs? Metro reached out to Philip Schoenberg, author of "Ghosts of Manhattan" and founder of "Ghosts of New York Walking Tours" to see what he thought.

"In my opinion the East Village with its many celebrity ghosts is the most haunted," Schoenberg said. "It has the most reported ghosts in the city. From St. Mark's Church to the Bowery to Cooper Union to the Public Theater, the area is full of the spirits of the undead."

Mysterious carving

The Central Park Witch

The next time you are in Central Park, check out the witch that's carved into Bethesda Terrace. Jonathan Kuhn, NYC Parks' director of art and antiquities, said the witch was part of a series that was supposed to symbolize the four seasons. The witch was the only carving completed.

Frightening fun

Halloween at a graveyard

All cemeteries are by definition kind of creepy, but if you are looking to spend Halloween traipsing among the dead, Trinity Cemetery at Trinity Church is the place to go. The cemetery was opened in 1697. For Halloween, Trinity Church, is hosting a trick or treat at the cemetery.

Smallpox

Scariest ruins in the city

If you visit the remains of the Renwick Smallpox Hospital on Roosevelt Island you can almost hear the screams of pain from former patients.

The hospital opened in 1856 and quickly became the place where poor souls infected with the disease in the city were shipped.

Ghost story

Creepiest urban legend in the five boroughs

For kids growing up on

Staten Island, the story of "Cropsey," the escaped mental patient who lived in the abandoned Willowbrook Mental Institution, was as well known as the bogeyman.

But the story took on a hint of truth when a 12-year-old girl was found murdered there in 1987.

— communication known as "evidential psychic mediumship."

If a connection was made, Relucio would pass along the spirit's message, but she simply moved on when that wasn't the case.

The point of seances is "to know that life exists after death," she said.

Relucio, 30, runs the Psychic and Mediumship Group and teaches these skills in classes at her apartment near Prospect Park.

Some seance attendees wished to hone their skills, while others hoped to connect with loved ones during the seance.

When Relucio dimmed the lights and began, she asked the group to keep an open mind. She explained she doesn't like to engage with cynics.

About 20 minutes before Brahimi arrived at the seance, Relucio felt the presence of his deceased uncle, describing a spirit near Brahimi's wife as a "male, who was not officially part of the army ... maybe a rebel."

"I came here thinking that I wouldn't be read," Brahimi said when the seance ended. "It's amazing."

Police arrived at Beacon Nursing Home to find the man beaten, unconscious and unresponsive.

Emergency medical personnel took him to St. John's Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival, police said. He had suffered a fractured skull.

A 67-year-old man was taken into custody by police at the scene. Police said he had been the victim's roommate since July, and the two men had been fighting lately about privacy and the curtain that separates their beds.

Offense. The Republican tried to slam his Democratic rival in the final debate of the mayor's race.

Republican candidate Joe Lhota, trailing some 40 points in recent polls, touted his experience and attacked Democrat Bill de Blasio in a final push during last night's debate.

"He has absolutely no experience," the former MTA chairman and deputy mayor said, calling de Blasio's positions, most recently as public advocate and city councilman, "mid-level."

De Blasio countered that Lhota's time as deputy for Mayor Rudy Giuliani amounted to working under an administration that divided the city.

As in previous debates, the candidates seemed to generally agree on the major issues facing the city, such as income inequality, but sparred over solutions.

De Blasio said inequalities could be addressed by improving access to education, such as through his plan to pay for universal pre-kindergarten by increasing taxes for wealthy New Yorkers.

Lhota, on the other hand, said economic subsidies, by increasing jobs, could decrease inequalities.

His rival later questioned this type of policy as "trickle-down economics" and "classic Republican thinking."

Lhota likened comments about his political party to the boxing match between Rocky and Drago in "Rocky IV."

"We know what happened in that match. The underdog won," Lhota said. "New York loves an underdog and, quite honestly, I am that underdog."

Testimony. NYPD narcotics detective arrested for perjury

A New York Police Department detective was arrested Tuesday and charged with perjury for giving false testimony against an accused East Harlem drug dealer.

Detective Abel Joseph, 39, was indicted in Manhattan criminal court for committing perjury in his grand jury testimony and later changing the details of his sworn testimony in a suppression hearing.

Manhattan District

Attorney Cyrus Vance Jr. fumed over the way the detective "wasted the time and resources of prosecutors, the court and a grand jury." Vance blamed the detective for the D.A.'s entire criminal case against an accused Harlem drug dealer being dismissed.

Because of Joseph's conflicting testimonies, the charges against the accused dealer were dropped.

Council votes to raise smoking age in NYC

The goal of the bill is to cut down on teen smoking. / GETTY IMAGES

Lighting up. New Yorkers would have to be 21 to buy smokes.

The New York City Council passed legislation yesterday raising the legal age for purchasing tobacco products to 21, as well as a law raising the minimum price of cigarettes to $10.50 and strengthening penalties against vendors who sell cigarettes on the cheap.

Councilman James Gennaro, the lead sponsor of the bill to raise the minimum age, hailed the bill as "the next big thing for the city, and hopefully for the state and for the country."

New York City will be the first major city in the U.S. to have a minimum tobacco purchasing age as high as 21.

Gennaro noted the city's aggressive work to combat teen smoking between 2001 and 2006, which has been credited with cutting the number of teen smokers in New York City down by half.

But Gennaro said progress has been stalled "since about 2007."

The bill was careful to include e-cigarettes as well, a move Gennaro said was "very important" in preventing teens from becoming nicotine addicts.

Barneys in hot seat over claims it discriminated

March. The luxury clothing store was the subject of a protest yesterday over perceptions of racial profiling.

Pickers headed for the Manhattan storefront of Barneys yesterday to express outrage over black customers' complaints that police stopped them after making luxury purchases.

The protest came as the state attorney general is investigating security practices at Barneys and fellow retailer Macy's.

dents at the two stores and later released without charges.

Barneys and Macy's officials said the New York Police Department had acted on their own, without input from store staff, in choosing to stop shoppers who included Rob

Brown, an actor in the HBO series "Treme."

On Tuesday, civil rights leader Al Sharpton met with Barneys Chief Executive Officer Mark Lee, who said his employees had no part in two incidents at his stores.

"No one from Barneys brought them to the attention of our internal security," Lee said.

Likewise, a Macy's spokeswoman denied that their staff had a role in the incidents there.

In 2005, Macy's paid $600,000 to settle similar allegations that many of the chain's New York stores had targeted blacks and Latinos for particular scrutiny of theft, according to the New York Attorney General's office.

Top Obamacare official apologizes for 'debacle'

HHS Secretary Kathleen Sebelius prepares to testify yesterday before a House Energy and Commerce Committee hearing in Rayburn Building on the failures of Affordable Care Act's enrollment website. / GETTY IMAGES

Flaws. Sebelius has become a punching bag for the GOP who have repeatedly called on her to resign.

President Barack Obama's top health official apologized yesterday for the botched rollout of the government's healthcare website, acknowledging it was a "debacle," while also blaming insurers for canceling coverage for hundreds of thousands of people.

Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius, testifying at a congressional hearing on the troubled website at the heart of Obama's healthcare overhaul, vowed to win back the confidence of millions of disappointed Americans.

"Hold me accountable for the debacle. I'm responsible," Sebelius said in response to questions from Marsha Blackburn, the Republican U.S. Representative of Tennessee, about who was responsible for problems that have prevented people from signing up for healthcare insurance plans.

Health care. Obama defends law, promises to get exchanges fixed

President Barack Obama took "full responsibility" for fixing the flawed U.S. health insurance exchange, while telling a Massachusetts audience that the state's experience with its health-care law portends eventual success for the federal version.

Obama spoke in Boston as his 2010

health care law is under sustained criticism from Republicans and on the same day that Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius apologized at a House hearing for the "debacle" of the failed opening of the online exchange that's central to the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. BLOOMBERG

Twitter hit with $124 million lawsuit over private stock sale

Pay. Like many Silicon Valley startups, it has paid employees and contractors using private stock.

Twitter Inc. was sued for $124 million yesterday by two companies claiming the social media darling fraudulently had them organize a private sale of its shares to stoke investor interest for an initial public offering then canceled it.

In a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Precedo Capital Group Inc. and Continental Advisors SA accused Twitter of using the aborted sale as a way to give the money-losing company a $10 billion market valuation and higher IPO price. "Twitter never intended to complete the offering on behalf of Twitter stockholders, in the private market, thereby causing substantial damages to the plaintiffs in the loss of commissions, fees and expenses, as well as through their business reputation," the lawsuit said.

Jim Prosser, a spokesman for Twitter, in a statement said the company had never had a relationship with Precedo or Continental Advisors.

The lawsuit comes as anticipation builds for Twitter's IPO, widely considered the most highly awaited since Facebook Inc. went public in May 2012.

Twitter was holding its first large investor lunch in New York yesterday. Institutional investors who met with Twitter this week say they are optimistic about its upcoming IPO and see it as a more conservative offering than Facebook's splashy IPO. REUTERS

According to a report by The Daily Mail, 26-year-old Yang Hu of Jiaying, China, recently took his depression to a new level and cut off his penis, because he figured: No girlfriend, no penis necessary — right?

Wrong.

Hu quickly regretted his decision and hopped on his bicycle to peddle to the nearest hospital, except he was in such a rush he forgot to grab his severed manhood.

Upon arrival at the hospital, doctors ordered Hu to cycle back home to retrieve it.

Unfortunately, by the time he returned from the undoubtedly agonizing journey, doctors were unable to reattach the organ because it had been without blood for too long.

They purchased the pills at a price of about $19 per bottle and sold each bottle for about $56 to 80 customers. The two made a profit of about $5,646.

where they were found to have a 100 percent positive match with human flesh.

Sibutramine is an appetite suppressant that is also banned in the U.S. because it is known to increase the risk of cardiovascular events like heart attacks and strokes. Phenolphthalein is a laxative, and the National Institutes of Health says it is "reasonably anticipated to be a human carcinogen."

Interview

Mortician is giving death a makeover

She is the face of death. From her hit YouTube series answering forbidden questions to new "Death Salon" sessions helping people get over the fear, Los Angeles native Caitlin Doughty, 29, has rapidly become the vanguard of "death acceptance" — a new movement demanding more engagement with the great beyond.

How can I get to know death?

There are many things you can do. First, make it a priority. Read all you can about death culture in your country and countries around the world. Watch films and documentaries about death. Go to cemeteries and just sit and meditate on how you are not a permanent fixture in this world. Doing these things is not morbid or weird, I promise, it's following an incredibly natural

Caitlin Doughty
DARREN BLACKBURN

Quoted

"Humans want to feel special and not admit that we are these ephemeral creatures."

Doughty

curiosity. Most importantly, go to funerals of the people you know and love. Don't skip them just because death freaks you out. Nothing is a better cure for death fear than rational exposure to real mortality.

What does a poor relationship with death look like, and what is the effect on life?

It looks like lot like modern culture. We always want more than the person next to us, to be more successful, have more money, get more likes on Facebook. These things distract us from the fact that we are animals that are doomed to die, just like every other creature on Earth. Humans want to feel special and not admit that we are these ephemeral creatures. It's understandable, but the denial hurts our relationship with reality.

How far do you believe it is possible for someone to be reconciled with death?

I believe no one ever totally 100 percent accepts it. There are fleeting moments where I feel like I do, but I only need to think about the death of my good friends, or who will take care of my cat if I die, and doubt sets back in. But the more you run these scenarios through your mind in a sensible way, the easier it becomes. The moments of fear pass much faster, and your ability to face any of life's harsher facts becomes stronger.

Tell us about the death acceptance movement.

I think it's very significant, but that's probably because I'm in the thick of it, of course I'm going to think it's the most important damn thing in the world. But I would also argue that our relationship with death is broken, and the stakes in fixing it are pretty high. The sheer number of people interested in collaborating or participating in bringing death, dying and alternative funeral options into the mainstream has increased so much in even the past few years, I can't help but believe it is working. The movement is for anyone who takes issue with the way we currently deny death in our funeral and medical system.

CULTURE

Twitter feed

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Kirstie Alley is up too early, Anna Kendrick is up too late, Tyra Banks does her own tech support and Jimmy Kimmel wants everyone to choose their words more carefully.

@kirstiealley: tooooo early

AnnaKendrick47: Oh hello again 4am, you whore.

@tyrabanks: My tablet got too hot to handle so I made her take a chill pill in the fridge. Hope she's not claustrophobic.

@jimmykimmel: note to every LA news channel - unless they're in a zoo, all bears are "on the loose"

The Word's spookiest celebrities

In honor of Halloween, we asked the Metro staff which celebrity scared them the most. Read it now — if you dare. Bwahahahahahaha!

Harrison Ford: Why would a 71-year-old man have an earring? It's creepy.

Bruce Jenner: What he's done to his once-hand-some face is more gasp-inducing than watching "The Conjuring."

Steve Buscemi's mouth: We love the guy, but you really wouldn't want to brush up against his grill in a dark alley, would you?

Mel Gibson: What has he been up to since his anti-Semitic rant? We'd be spooked to venture into his basement at this point. Dude is probably working on something cah-razy.

Taylor Swift: It keeps us up at night worrying about what pretty young man-thing she'll set her blonde succubus sights on next.

THE WORD

@dorothyatmetro
dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Boys beware.

James Franco: Nobody should have that much energy and accomplish that many different things.

It's terrifying. We're scared of what he'll decide to add to his résumé next — brain surgery? A human centipede made entirely of his comedy mafia bros? (Actually, we'd like to see that.)

Raquel Welch: We're pretty sure she is one of the Tupperware moms from the TV series "Eerie, Indiana" — the kind that sleep in Tupperware coffins to stay fresh. She doesn't seem to be aging.

Nicki Minaj: She looks like she just stepped out of a wax museum, and not in the "Oh, fun! Inanimate objects have come to life!" way. More in the "Oh God, the mannequins are alive! Oh, the horror! Oh, the humanity!" way.

Ashton Kutcher: What deal with the devil did that guy do? Highest-paid actor on TV? Check. Mila Kunis as a girlfriend? Check. Signing over his soul is the only explanation.

Talking points

Lohan is way, way off the wagon

October apparently hasn't been an easy month for Lindsay Lohan's fledgling sobriety. The troubled starlet has been spending a lot of time at bars, clubs and parties this month, and she's reportedly fallen off the wagon when it comes to booze, according to Star magazine. "She was definitely drinking alcohol. She got increasingly sloppy as the hours went on," a source who spotted Lohan at a party in L.A. last week tells the magazine. "At one point Lindsay was literally hanging onto a couple of her friends, like they were holding her up." She's also reportedly been sneaking vodka cocktails at bars in New York, and she partied till dawn at "an alcohol-fueled bash" in Hollywood with Paris Hilton and Miley Cyrus recently. "Lindsay arrived around 3 a.m. and was still there when dawn was breaking," a source says.

Spelling's sex tape

Tori Spelling admits that there's a sex tape featuring her and husband Dean McDermott floating around out there, though it's been a couple of years since she's heard about it. According to Spelling's sixth memoir, "Spelling It Like It Is," she and McDermott were looking to spice things up in 2009. "Dean said, 'We should tape ourselves having sex,'" she writes. "He had a little portable tripod, and he set up his video camera on it. Afterward, I checked my angles and they were good, so I allowed him to keep it." Apparently a former friend of the couple snatched it off their home computer and attempted to sell it two years later. "I was horrified," Spelling writes, explaining that they sent the man a cease and desist letter. "We never heard from him again, and the incident went away."

Brown checks into rehab

Chris Brown has checked himself into rehab for some anger management issues just a day after appearing in court over charges he assaulted a man outside a Washington, D.C., hotel. "Chris Brown has elected to enter a rehab facility," his rep says in a statement. "His goal is to gain focus and insight into his past and recent behavior, enabling him to continue the pursuit of his life and his career from a healthier vantage point."

KEANU REEVES

The superstar has directed his first movie and is finally playing the villain.

HE KNOWS TAI CHI

It's hardly surprising that the first movie Keanu Reeves directed is a martial arts picture. With "Man of Tai Chi," the onetime Neo teamed up with two of his "Matrix" colleagues — stuntman Tiger Hu Chen, who stars, and choreographer Yuen Woo-ping — to tell of a student of the titular peaceful style who gets coerced into an underground fighting ring run by a sinister businessman (played by Reeves).

Were you nervous to direct your first picture?

I wasn't, actually. I'd been around prep and production my whole career. A lot

Kung fu fighting

Keanu's favorite martial arts movies (at least when he was asked):

- "Five Fingers of Death" (1972)
- "Fist of Legend" (1994)
- "Drunken Master" (1978)
- "Once Upon a Time in China" (1991)

of the rooms I was walking into I'd been in, but never been the director of them.

The action scenes are clean and allow viewers to clearly see the fighters' performances.

The hope was that the action sequences work dramatically. I felt we should be with Tiger's journey as he was changing from this innocent guy to this person who's going to a darker side. There are certain shots during the action scenes where we're not actually seeing punches. We're on his face. We're seeing his expressions.

How was it playing the villain for a change?

GETTY IMAGES

Global filming

What is it like working with the Chinese film industry versus Hollywood?

We had SARFT — that's the Chinese censorship administration. They don't have a rating system, so there's no R or PG-13 or NC-17. I tried to make the film along the lines of a PG-13. They do a script review, then an image review. I had to make a couple cuts. I had to take down the intensity of the violence a little bit. It was weird. It was going from 11 punches to 5 punches, or 33 strikes to 17.

I haven't played villains, I've played red herrings. Villains are great. They have a great passion. They're simple. I thought of Donaka as being interested in a kind of vampirism. He wants to consume someone's life — to see them transform from innocence to killing or being killed.

Shooting desire

Interview. The “Blue Is the Warmest Color” director talks about passion cooling down.

A lot has happened since Abdellatif Kechiche's “Blue Is the Warmest Color” premiered at the Cannes Film Festival in May. The relationship drama won the Palme d'Or, but in its wake its two actresses — Adele Exarchopoulos and Lea Seydoux, who play lovers — have spoken out about difficulties of making the film. Kechiche has even written an op-ed, slamming Seydoux and others he felt were trying to destroy his film. In person, though, he's calm and polite.

What drew you to make a film that looked at a couple that was homosexual?

I was hoping we would be able to get beyond the fact that it was two women. And while I was shooting the movie and creating the movie, as it went along, I forgot I was dealing with two women.

It's a rare portrait of a couple that shows them moving from falling in love to falling out of it.

Part of what I wanted to work with is [a relationship] that starts off with a strong carnal passion and, with time, cools down. But I think that's something that happens with everybody.

... To continue to have a relationship that resonates, you have to find and have other reasons that keep you together.

How did you work with your actors to get them deeply ingrained in their characters?

I like to try things and push them to extremes. Sometimes with the interpretation of the role, there's a resistance.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

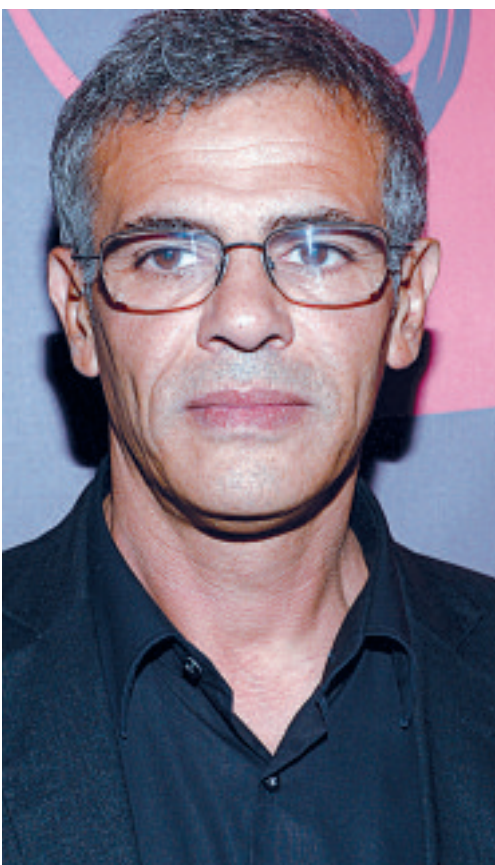

Q&A

The stereotype of Europe versus America is that we're very repressed while Europe is very open-minded. Homosexuality is a particularly controversial issue here. I don't agree. I think it's the opposite. It's much more open here, from what I've witnessed. [His interpreter interjects: “He hasn't been to Podunk, Iowa, yet.”] It's confirmed by what's been happening in France these last few months. I never imagined there was such a taboo that was still there.

I don't think we have a lot to teach others — we have a lot of lessons to get from others. I heard a lot about American Puritanism. But I feel it's better here. For example, Steven Spielberg — I had been warned that he would probably be shocked by the film. And when I spoke with him I was surprised that he told me how much he loved the film and he couldn't wait to show it to his daughters — that he felt it was an initiation to love that was beautiful.

10 Films to check out

Box office draw.

Here what's coming to (or already at) your local googolplex.

2 'Last Vegas' Five Oscar winners — Michael Douglas, Robert De Niro, Morgan Freeman, Kevin Kline and Mary Steenburgen — prove that even our finest actors can make a bunch of Viagra jokes.

3 'Free Birds' This is about time traveling turkeys voiced by Owen Wilson and Woody Harrelson. Fiction — it's sometimes stranger than fact.

4 'Dallas Buyers Club' The Matthew McConaughey Comeback Tour continues with playing a Texas homophobe who got AIDS in the '80s and started a black market company to sell drugs not yet approved by the FDA.

Hailee Steinfeld and Asa Butterfield play kid warriors in "Ender's Game." / RICHARD FOREMAN

Must-see

1 'Ender's Game' Sci-fi legend Orson Scott Card may be a massive homophobe, but he's a talented massive homophobe. His most famous book — about a boy (Asa Butterfield) being trained for war with belligerent aliens in the far-off future — finally becomes the latest would-be space spectacular.

5 'About Time' "Love Actually" maven Richard Curtis goes a touch sci-fi with his latest, which follows a young man (Domhnall Gleeson) who uses his time travel abilities to woo Rachel McAdams.

6 'Diana' With the right makeup, Naomi Watts looks rather a bit like Princess Di, which is good enough to make a movie about her.

7 'Man of Tai Chi' Keanu Reeves' directorial debut is a martial arts spectacular, following a budding mater (Tiger Chen) coerced into underground ass-kicking.

8 'Jackass Presents: Bad Grandpa' Johnny Knoxville gives his geriatric "Jackass" character Irving Zisman a game young grandson (Jackson Nicoll), sending them around America, "Borat"-style.

9 'Blue is the Warmest Color' Abdellatif Kechiche's relationship saga won the Palme d'Or. But everyone's talking about the lengthy, graphic lesbian sex scenes, because of course they are.

10 'Gravity' Sandra Bullock and George Clooney — and no one else — play astronauts trying to survive in a state of weightlessness.

Special events. Theater may not have been on your mind for tonight, but perhaps you should rethink.

'Sleeping Beauty'

Choreographer Matthew Bourne hasn't produced just any "Sleeping Beauty." He's given New York audiences the gift of gothic romance by adding vampires, love triangles, cheeky humor and plot twists to the classic ballet, here brilliantly danced to the Tchaikovsky score you already know and love. On All Hallows' Eve, those with a ticket to the show can also attend a pre-party at The Dream New York (5:30-7:15 p.m.) featuring thematic Blood-tini and Bloody Good Bubbly cocktails, which are free to anyone in costume. www.nycitycenter.org

Luxe fragrance house

Kilian

This November, luxury fragrance brand Kilian will open its second retail store in the Meatpacking District. In honor of the launch the brand has created a special fragrance named Apple Brandy — "apple" for New York and "brandy" for creator Kilian Hennessy's childhood in the Hennessy cellars (he's the heir to the cognac brand). The perfume will be sold exclusively at the boutique and online.

Juniper Ridge

If you need an escape from city life, fragrance maker Juniper Ridge's Williamsburg pop-up shop at Fellow Barber might be for you. The company makes natural scents from real plants, bark, moss and mushrooms found hiking in the backcountry. At the pop-up, visitors will find a "transporter booth" that takes them to wilderness destinations through fragrance, including the coastal hills of Big Sur, Topanga Canyon and Death Valley. They will also demonstrate distillations, part of the perfume-making process.

Maison Martin Margiela on designing West's tour looks

This is an exciting time for Kanye West. First, he puts a 15-carat rock on the finger of that small-time fiancée of his, Kim Kardashian. Next, he gets a wardrobe delivery courtesy of Maison Martin Margiela.

The French fashion house that has forever been shrouded in mystery has provided the singer with all of the outfits for his upcoming Yeezus tour. The extensive custom-made collection consists of 20 ready-to-wear pieces, 10 couture pieces and a rumored "exclusive" pair of kicks — we're intrigued.

The tour — the rapper's first solo concert in five years — takes him on 30 dates around North America and has unsurprisingly already garnered much music media attention. But now, with the news of Margiela's involvement, it's caught the eye of the fashion world too.

We spoke to Margiela's team, which answered the questions we were dying to know — except for the big one: Will Margiela have any involvement in the wedding? For now, that one remains a mystery.

How involved has Kanye been in designing the

What can you get?

Will any of the pieces from the tour retail?

None of these pieces will be sold. Similar sneakers can be found in stores, as they are Margiela classics, but this pair [was] reproduced in special colors for the Yeezus tour.

collection?

The collection is a rework of Margiela's haute couture archive pieces. They have been chosen both by Kanye and the Maison. The Maison then researched new fabrics and volumes to reinterpret the pieces and match contemporary artist Vanessa Beecroft's scenography.

Can you guide us through some of the key pieces?

An elongated embroidered bomber jacket was remade from a 1900s lady's dress, a coat was made out of military blankets and military jackets were assembled together to create an oversized cape. As for the veils, some have been reinterpreted from our archives, while others were created specially for the tour. One veil is composed of marble pieces and another one is made from CD-ROMs. All are embroidered on a silk chiffon base.

How long has it taken to pull the outfits together?

It took approximately five weeks from research to the final fittings.

Are celebrity relations a direction Margiela is looking to take?

The Maison still has a very discreet policy in terms of celebrity dressing, but we always choose to work with people we feel close to. ALICE TATE

Spooky. That profile you clicked on might have had some help.

Having trouble clicking your way to love? If writing exciting copy for your online dating profile makes you wince, you're not alone.

Just ask Laurie Davis, author of "Love @ First Click: The Ultimate Guide to Online Dating" and founder of eFlirt Expert, an online dating consultancy firm. Online daters enlist her help with writing a profile, messaging, profile management and relationship coaching.

Davis says that "singles have a challenging time writing about themselves ... regardless of profession."

Davis says people are often surprised that eFlirt's clients include authors, journalists and even marketers.

Depending on which package her clients — who range in age from 19 to 70 — enroll in, they are connected with certified coaches. The coaches help them with services like a one-time profile critique or even monthly subscription packages to help them learn the ropes of dating online with some extra help.

The eFlirt consultants — all of whom have degrees in English, journalism or communication — follow a course instruction with classroom time, practical work and an exam. "Yes, it's a real exam!" she promises, adding that there are written questions as well as a challenge to create a work-thy profile.

Davis says that though the words are important, daters can't ignore their photos. "Ultimately, without great photos you'll have a tough time attracting the right type of match," Davis points out.

According to Charles J. Orlando, relationship expert and author of "The Problem with Women ... is Men" book series, there's really nothing wrong with relying on others — friends or professionals — to weigh in on your profile.

He advises daters to make choices that are right for them. "In the real world, both parties communicate via verbal and non-verbal cues. But with online dating, initial impressions and the 'Please allow me to introduce myself' process is virtually non-existent," Orlando says that profiles are an start, but that just like offline dating, people "reveal who they are slowly, over time."

So, if you aren't a great writer, he says it might be useful to consult a writing service, but adds that eventually you'll be face-to-face. "Pulling out your best attributes is great ... but you'll need to be real."

How to

Davis' tips for a clickable profile:

1 Wear color in your main photo. Wearing a bold color will help your picture pop when you show up in search results with 20-plus other singles.

2 Upload at least one action shot. A photo of you doing something fun shows off your lifestyle more than any description you type.

3 Make your profile action-oriented. Your profile is a conversation starter. It's easier for matches to strike up a digital conversation when you mention activities that fill your life.

4 Edit for virtual confidence. Confidence is sexy, even online, and can be conveyed through tone. Delete wishy-washy phrases like "I guess," "maybe" and "sort of." But don't go overboard — there's a thin line between confident and cocky.

Dating news you can use

Love-connection magic for your earbuds

WFMU radio host and producer Andrea Silenzi is exploring the world of dating with an audio project she calls "Why Oh Why?" If you think you're a tech wizard with your online dating experience, Silenzi's interview with her grandma Phyllis has you beat — she met her late husband, Sol, in 1998 on a site called Classifieds200.com. Hear Grandma Phyllis or learn why living in New Jersey may decrease your dating chances by tuning in at www.wfmu.org/playlists/LK and submit your own dating stories to the airwaves by sending them to silenzi@wfmu.org.

just worried about making the love connections happen; they're analyzing the numbers. The site found that more than half of people surveyed (57 percent) said that a happy relationship is more important to them than their career. The bad news? Forty-eight percent of survey respondents said their work-life balance stresses them out. But all those hours at the office might pay off in the bedroom: Of those survey respondents who dated someone at work, 65 percent had a one-night stand and 56 percent set up a friends-with-benefits situation. Rawr.

Parties. We've rounded up the best activities to liven up the ghoulish occasion.

Haven

The Sanctuary Hotel's Haven Rooftop (132 W. 47th St., 212-466-9000) is hosting its annual Haunted Haven Soiree tonight. Spend Allhallow's Eve high above Manhattan for $20. DJs will spin live on the roof all night, and prizes will be awarded for the best costumes. An open bar and hors d'oeuvres will be available from 6-7 p.m. For reservations, email events@sanctuary-hotelnyc.com.

Gran Electrica

Gran Electrica (5 Front St., Brooklyn, 718-852-2700) knows that the only thing better than a Day of the Dead party is dinner and a Day of the Dead party. The Mexican restaurant will serve dinner at 6 tonight, and the

The Boys are back in town

Sons of Essex

Sons of Essex (133 Essex St., 212-674-7100) is resurrecting the age of the Bowery Boys — a street gang that dominated downtown in the 1800s — this Halloween. Partygoers are encouraged to pay tribute by wearing their best 19th century attire, such as stovepipe hats, boots and black vests. Come ready for costume contests and drink specials. A portion of all proceeds will go toward the Bowery Mission, which aids homeless and hungry New Yorkers. Bring a non-perishable food item or an article of clothing and get a voucher for a free drink or appetizer.

fiesta starts at 9. There is no entry fee, and guests can attend the party without coming for dinner. Expect a busy night with a DJ, a Mexican brass marching band, makeup stations, cocktails and dancing under the Brooklyn Bridge.

Wythe Hotel

The hotel (80 Wythe Ave., Brooklyn, 718-460-8000) is teaming up with record label Ghostly International for tonight's affair. Two floors will become lairs of the dead, where Ghostly-curated DJs will perform all night. Tickets are $15, and the costume-required party kicks off at 9 p.m.

Beyond tonight

Day (and night) of the Dead

Halloween doesn't have to end tonight. Richard Sandova's Mexican restaurant Maya (1191 1st Ave., 212-585-1818) is celebrating the Day of the Dead from Friday through Sunday, highlighting an assortment of tamales and a Margarita del Diablo.

Not to be outdone, Ofrenda (113 Seventh Ave. South, 212-924-2305) offered a Day of the Dead menu all October long — tonight's your last chance to check it out. Specials include dishes like tacos de cabeza (braised veal head) and robalo para la catrina (pan-seared grouper). Dia de los Muertos cocktails are a given, too.

From now through Saturday, Hecho en Dumbo (354 Bowery, 212-937-4245) will be offering a $40 prix fixe Dia de los Muertos menu. Aiming to please the adventurous and novice foodie, Chef Danny Mena has included several fright-worthy cuisines, from bone marrow and beef tongue tacos to chicken tacos with a sweet and spicy chile chipotle marinade. Chef Mena also will be serving up Dia de los Muertos deals through the same dates next door at Salon Hecho (356 Bowery, 212-937-4245), which will have live music tonight at 9, as well as at his other NYC restaurant, Sembrado (432 E. 13th St., 212-729-4206). MEREDITH ENGEL

You can bring this hot chef home

Hot Chef. Michael Anthony's new cookbook will have you whipping up his recipes in no time (he promises).

As executive chef of the revered Gramercy Tavern for seven years, Michael Anthony has served and pleased countless diners with his simple, seasonal, yet impactful approach to American cuisine. But one diner, his future wife, was a bit harder to please. Anthony recalls courting her with a dish involving baked clams — and eventually winning her over with it. Fortunately for the rest of us, the chef manages to work magic on pretty much anything that comes out of the GT kitchen, and with the “Gramercy Tavern Cookbook” on shelves now, Anthony's recipes are that much more accessible. We spoke to the James Beard Award-winning chef about adapting his renowned recipes for home cooks.

A few of your recipes seem intimidating. Did you have home chefs in mind when deciding which to include?

We weren't willing to say you can kind of cook from this cookbook or you can cook some of the things from the book. We wanted to say you can really use this. It's a big, solid, beautiful book, with a lot of textures and a lot of colors, but we wanted that to play a dual role of something that would live in someone's kitchen; we wanted it to have the ears turned down and splattered in sauce. It was real work; I had to be very open-minded and really channel the home cook. My parents live in rural Ohio and these recipes were written so mom could make them.

As our Hot Chef you have to tell us: What did you make for your wife to win her over?

My wife's family has a house in the Hamptons, and as a girl she went out

Gramercy Tavern (42 E. 20th St., 212-477-0777) boasts Michael Anthony as its executive chef. / ELLEN SILVERMAN

Bonus question

In the book you have a little section on pickling, and we heard you love the technique. What's your favorite thing to pickle?

Anyone can do it, and it works for so many different vegetables. Carrots and cucumbers are the most obvious, but I also like things that are less obvious ... like burdock and ramps. You can pickle nearly anything, and the same technique that's used to make delicious carrots can be used on things that are less familiar. You come up with a way to utilize the stuff you bought at the market and extend the seasonality. The book gives people who don't cook a chance to make something cool, like little pints of pickles to keep in your fridge. If you're having friends over for cocktails or beers you can put that on the table and say, “I made that!” Or you might incorporate that into a pan of sauteed zucchini and serve with corn and peppers and add pickles on top, and all the sudden you have something ridiculously beautiful and kind of complex.

there and loved summertime with her family. I asked her what were the things she remembered eating during her childhood, and she said baked clams. I started cooking versions of baked clams that were kind of complicated, and would give to her and she'd say, “That's really good. ... But it doesn't evoke any nostalgia.” I got so fired up about the idea.

Once I nailed it — and preserved what she remembered about the baked clams and made it just a little bit better (we folded chopped scallops into the mix) — she fell in love with that. And what's funny is it became a very popular thing on our Tavern menu.

TAKE A BITE OUT OF YOUR BEER

Shrimp and grits gets a drunken twist at The Smith. / THE SMITH

Food buzz. Chefs across the city are cooking with beer (and sometimes even putting it in their food).

Maybe they were inspired by Oktoberfest, or maybe by the fact that it's just plain tasty, but we found several chefs around town marrying beer's malty, hoppy and sometimes bitter flavors with meats and marinades, braises and batters, seafood and syrups — even in ice cream.

At Delicatessen in SoHo, chef Michael Ferraro creates a South Carolina (via Ireland) pulled pork taco served with cabbage slaw and garlic chips. "Everyone in New York does a sweet, Texas-style pulled pork, so I wanted to do something different and went with a South Carolina-style," Ferraro says. "To braise the pork, we use a dark, flavorful beer like Guinness, which infuses a malty taste into the meat. The reduction really pairs well with the mustardy, vinegar-based sauce we make for the tacos."

Adding beer to a batter is a simple way of creating a richer flavor for this crunchy coating. In Brooklyn, Pork Slope chef Dale Talde chooses beer from nearby Red Hook brewery, Sixpoint, to create a tasty coat for his fried catfish. "When we started working on creating the fried catfish dish, we immediately wanted to use Sixpoint since it is a local favorite. I wanted a really yeasty taste to give the catfish a greater depth of flavor."

At The Smith restaurants in Manhattan, beer-battered string beans make for a crispy fried snack. Beer batter is one thing, but how about beer butter? The bespoke Smith Ale (a pale ale made by Sixpoint) is used for the bean batter and is whipped into garlic and herb butter for Smith's grilled shrimp with jalapeño grits and green tomato salad. Smith executive chef Brian Ellis says the flavors of the shrimp and grits "are taken to another level with that subtle hint of bitterness" from the beer butter.

Recently opened East Village hotspot Picnic has two beer-infused dishes. Executive chef Nicholas Nostadt incorporates Hefeweizen into a mix of apricot nectar, Dijon mustard and herbs and spices as a marinade for mussels. And, his roasted chicken with orange cauliflower and apple mustard is finished with a beer syrup. "The spices in the Hefeweizen play well off the mussels," says the chef, who loves "to find ways to incorporate" beer into his cooking. "As for the beer syrup," he adds, "I love mixing sweet and savory, and incorporating a more flavorful beer into this syrup which makes it not too sweet for the roasted chicken."

How about dessert?

Chef Laurent Tourondel uses Brooklyn Brewery's Imperial Stout for the ice cream he pairs with his orange spiced chocolate cake at Arlington Club. Tourondel says it's one of his "favorite new desserts" at the steakhouse. "The stout has a really deep, rich flavor that balances the cake nicely. When I first tasted it I knew I had to use it in a sweet dish and that it would make the perfect ice cream. It has a complex flavor that holds up to the orange and spice."

Various Locations in Sunnyside, Queens, $10-$25
www.sunnysideshines.org
Sunnyside up! Is that how you like your eggs? How about your dinner? Seventeen Sunnyside restaurants — like Bliss Street Station, Venturo and Dee Thai — are offering three-course dinner menus for only $25 with a few also hooking up a $10 two-course lunch menu.

LECTURE

Pick Your Poison: Mind-Altering Drugs, Malicious Microbes and Medications

Every Monday through Dec. 9, 6 p.m.
American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West at 79th St., $295, 212-769-5100
www.amnh.org
Now don't get too excited thinking you're going to show up, drop acid, eat a few mushrooms and check out the dinosaur exhibit. This is a class that'll meet every Monday through December to learn about how things like alcohol, antidepressants, caffeine and other toxins affect our brains, behavior and long-term health.

Horoscope

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Put more muscle behind any job you're asked to do. You will encourage others to look to you for answers.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't give in too easily today. Keep personal information a secret. Sharing a good time is one thing, but divulging your feelings is something else.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Take pride in what you do, and you will be given the opportunity to take on more responsibility. It's a good day to attend to business or sign deals.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Expect to receive suggestions from well-meaning people, but when it comes down to making a decision, do things your way.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Don't wait for someone else to step in and take over. Broaden your plans and expect to raise your standard of living.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. You'll thrive on change. Share your emotions and don't be afraid to stand up to anyone. Someone from a different background will spark your interest.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Discuss your plans and get started on them. The more energy you put behind them, the more interest you will gather.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Work relentlessly on whatever you do if you want to receive star treatment. Compliments will encourage you to make an important move.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. He who hesitates is lost. Don't let an emotional situation ruin your plans or your fun. Getting involved will be to your benefit.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. You will have to make an instant decision followed by a fast move if you want to maintain what you've worked so hard to achieve.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Bend a little, and you will get whatever you want. Conversations will help you gain respect.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't second-guess yourself. If you don't understand, ask. Once you have a clear picture regarding what you are supposed to do, you will be able to add your touch. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Candy is a chemical nightmare

Re: 'Scary Halloween Candy' (Metro, Oct. 30)
I was delighted to see your article on scary candy in Wednesday's Metro. Parents need to cop on to the garbage ingredients that go into their children's candy. Chemicals that are banned worldwide have a free reign in the U.S. due to powerful lobbying. For a few bucks more, you can get the good stuff.

Bipolar effects far-reaching

Re: 'Don't simplify bipolar disorder' (Metro, Oct. 29)
Thank you, Jennifer Matrone, for your comments in Metro on bipolar disorder. I work as a licensed clinical social worker in New York City Department of Education. We have mood disorders — bipolar, ADHD and autism — on every level. But mostly we have learning disorders (undiagnosed) that lead to frustration, anxiety and emotional disorders and behaviors. Thank you.
Every day is a learning experience and a challenge.

Knicks hold on for win in opener

NBA. Unlike the Nets, their Manhattan brethren got off to a solid opening to the season.

Knicks head coach Mike Woodson said prior to Wednesday's opening night tilt that the key to replicating last season's success is to dominate at home.

His team definitely didn't dominate, but they still managed to desperately hang on to a tenuous 90-83 win over the lowly Bucks.

The Knicks got off to a sluggish start and still managed to methodically decimate the Bucks in the first half, leading by 25 points at the break. But something happened to the home team in the second half, as they began to play down to the level of their competition.

But behind Carmelo Anthony's game-high

Metta World Peace had four points and four rebounds in his Knicks' debut. / GETTY IMAGES 19 points (7-of-16 shooting), the Knicks managed to escape with the win. Raymond Felton chipped in with 18 points, while Iman Shumpert added 16.

Other than the solid shooting and efficient play, there wasn't much to appreciate in a match-up that pitted one of the Eastern Conference's elite against an also ran. The fact that it was opening night — and also the fans got to see the renovated Garden — were about the only reasons to attend, as the Knicks sleepily whisked past the Bucks — until the nervous vibe in the final two minutes.

False start

Nets get off to rough start in Cleveland

The Nets' dream of an NBA title run will have to start with a loss.

Brooklyn's new-look team lost 98-94 in their season opener at the Cavaliers.

The Nets trailed by nine points entering the fourth quarter, but pulled even with just seconds left in the game. But Anderson Varejao's jumper with 28 seconds left gave the Cavs a 93-91 lead they would never relinquish.

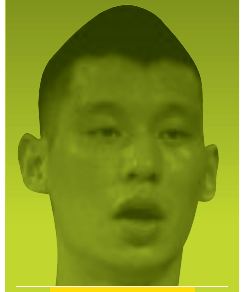

Point guard Deron Williams, who was questionable with an injured ankle, did play as expected, but just for 22 minutes. He finished 2-of-6 for seven points with nine assists.

New Nets Paul Pierce and Kevin Garnett had 17 points and eight points respectively in their debuts. Brook Lopez led all scorers with 21 points on 9-of-18 shooting.

Tristan Thompson led the Cavaliers with 18 points and nine rebounds. METRO

Ryan expects Milliner to excel despite issues

Dee Milliner will start the game Sunday for the Jets. Now the goal becomes for him to finish the game on the field as well.

The rookie cornerback was routinely matched up with Marvin Jones last week and was soundly beaten all game. Jones

Milliner was ranked 101st out of 103 cornerbacks in the NFL by Advanced NFL Stats, a next-level stats website. / GETTY IMAGES finished with eight catches — on eight targets — for 122 yards and four touchdowns. He was benched late in the game. It's not the first time he's struggled.

"He's close to being that player we want," head coach Rex Ryan said. "By the time the season's over, I think he will be the best rookie corner and playing better than any rookie corner in this year's draft."

Milliner will have Drew Brees' Saints and the NFL's third-best passing offense (310.7 yards per game) awaiting him.

"He's one of the great quarterbacks in today's game," Milliner said. "He's going to be out there and of course I'm the new kid out there so he's going to look to attack me on things."

NFL power rankings | by Mike Greger

No. 1

Seahawks
(7-1)

It was amazing to hear the blowhards on ESPN marginalize Seattle's win Monday night. Yes, the offense struggled. But the best defense in football got a stop and the win.

No. 2

Chiefs
(8-0)

Eagles fans will be sick to their stomachs as the chatter about Andy Reid for Coach of the Year increases, especially if they knock off Denver.

No. 5

Saints
(6-1)

It's been said before but it still rings true. At the rate the Saints and Seahawks are going, it's going to come down to home-field advantage in the NFC.

No. 8

Patriots
(6-2)

These aren't your dad's Pats. They win ugly — very ugly. But they still win and that's why they'll be there in January, just like an old hoodie.

No. 3

Colts
(5-2)

Take a quick inventory of Indy's schedule. They might not lose again until a possible playoff preview Dec. 8 in Cincy.

No. 6

49ers
(6-2)

In the game everybody forgot — please don't put a team in London — Colin Kaepernick finally (maybe) got his groove back.

No. 9

Packers
(5-2)

If this newfangled run game, led by Eddie Lacy, is for real, Packers fans have a reason to do the Lambeau Leap themselves.

No. 4

Broncos
(7-1)

The Broncos' pass rush — not QB Peyton Manning for once — proved to be the difference in this week's victory against Washington.

No. 7

Bengals
(6-2)

If I had Marty McFly's time machine, I would go back and not cut Andy Dalton from my fantasy team. He has 11 touchdown passes in his last three games.

No. 10

Lions
(5-3)

You could argue Dallas choked it away. That's disrespectful to the NFL's second-best passing offense — and Megatron still isn't 100 percent.
